

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

IN RE: FYRE FESTIVAL LITIGATION

1:17-CV-03296 (PKC)

SECOND CONSOLIDATED AMENDED CLASS ACTION COMPLAINT

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of themselves, and all others similarly situated, and file this Second Consolidated Amended Class Action Complaint against defendants Fyre Media, Inc. (“Fyre Media”), William McFarland (“McFarland”), Jeffrey Atkins p/k/a Ja Rule (“Atkins”), Grant Margolin (“Margolin”) (the foregoing shall collectively be referred to as the “Defendants”) and DOE INVESTORS 1 through 15, inclusive; DOE PROPERTY OWNER; and DOES 1 through 50, inclusive. Plaintiffs allege the following based on information and belief, the investigation of counsel, review of public documents, and personal knowledge as to the allegations pertaining to themselves.

INTRODUCTION

1. This class action lawsuit seeks redress for Defendants’ knowing failure to organize, prepare, and provide ticket purchasers and attendees of the Fyre Festival with the experience that the Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, extensively promoted and marketed as being a luxurious, packaged music festival to take place on two consecutive weekends in April and May of 2017, on a private island in the Bahamas featuring, among other things, “first-class culinary experiences and a luxury atmosphere,”¹ and “top notch food, luxurious lodging, and hot entertainment in a stunning locale.” (“Fyre Festival’ or ‘Festival”).²

2. The Fyre Festival achieved media infamy in April and May 2017 when its attendees arrived on an island in the Bahamas to rain-soaked grounds, a canceled festival (Defendants cancelled the event on the first day), emergency tent shelters, and a scarcity of toilets. Defendants did not provide a musical festival, or adequate food, shelter, basic amenities or medical care to attendees, which created a dangerous and panicked situation among attendees—suddenly finding themselves stranded on an island without basic provisions—that was closer to “The Hunger Games” or “Lord of the Flies” than Coachella. Festival-goers survived on bare rations, little more than bread and a slice of cheese, and tried to escape the elements in the only shelter provided by Defendants: small clusters of “FEMA tents,” exposed on a sand bar that were soaked and battered by wind and rain.

3. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, shamelessly lured festival-goers into an unplanned, unorganized, disaster-stricken area that was far from the reality that Defendants promised in their promotional advertising of the event. The Fyre Festival was publicly described as a “complete disaster,” “mass chaos,” and a “post-apocalyptic nightmare.”

4. Attendees’ efforts to escape the unfolding disaster were hamstrung by their reliance upon Defendants for transportation, as well as that Defendants promoted the Fyre Festival as a “cashless” event—Defendants had instructed attendees to upload funds to a cashless wristband, dubbed a “FyreBand”, for use at the Fyre Festival rather than bringing any cash. As such, attendees were generally unable to purchase basic transportation on local taxis or buses.

5. As a result, Plaintiffs were not only misled and defrauded by the false representations by Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, of the Fyre Festival, but also were stuck on an island to fend for themselves.

6. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, were well aware that they were ill prepared for the Fyre Festival, which resulted in the horrid conditions in which Plaintiffs and class members suffered, and Defendants knowingly lured attendees with false and fraudulent pretenses. Defendants knew the Fyre Festival was going to be a colossal failure that would place the lives of attendees in danger for weeks if not months in advance. Individuals engaged by Defendants and others have since acknowledged that no infrastructure for food service or accommodations was in place—the island was totally barren—that the few contractors who had been retained by Defendants were refusing to work because they had not been paid and that music performers had never been contracted and/or never paid, or told by the Defendants not to attend.

7. In the weeks before the Fyre Festival was to begin, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, were aware that the Fyre Festival could not go forward, began reaching out to performers and celebrities in advance of the Fyre Festival and warned them not to attend—acknowledging that the Fyre Festival was outrageously underequipped, their lack of preparation, and the dangerous situation they had created.

8. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, did not extend this warning, however, to Plaintiffs and other consumers. Hordes of attendees arrived at Great Exuma in the Bahamas and were met with a chaotic and unsafe encampment. Thus, at the same time that Defendants knew that the Fyre Festival would be a disaster and were knowingly lying about the Fyre Festival's accommodations and safety and advising performers not to attend, Defendants continued to heavily promote the event and sell ticket packages and were aware that Class members were incurring expenses, in addition to ticket costs, and faced dangerous conditions because of Defendants' greediness for ticket sales and money. In particular, it has been reported that defendant Margolin, the chief marketing officer for the Fyre Festival, was the marketing person behind the entire event, and was particularly eager to keep pushing ticket sales, while knowing that the Festival could not proceed as represented and having visited the site, and that he stated at meetings that he was a marketing genius and a prodigy, that the concerns about the Festival did not matter, and that they should continue to sell tickets. Defendants Margolin, Atkins and McFarland repeatedly ignored reports that there was no way that the Fyre Festival could take place due to lack of infrastructure and other insurmountable problems.

9. Ticket packages cost between approximately $1,000 and $12,500, which were to include, among other things, luxury accommodations, amenities and activities, including musical performances. Upon information and belief, ticket package prices increased above and beyond the aforesaid range as the event drew closer (some ticket packages surpassed $100,000). Upon information and belief, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, sold many thousands of ticket packages to their Festival.

10. Attendees suffered financial damages associated with the purchase of the tickets and/or other expenditures associated with the Fyre Festival depending on the ticket package purchased and purchases made in connection with the Fyre Festival and their attempts to return home safely and expeditiously. Ticketholders in route to the vacation of a lifetime found themselves stranded when the event was abruptly cancelled on the first day due to inadequate preparation. Not only did ticketholders and attendees shell out thousands of dollars to purchase tickets to the event, but in order to attend the event, they were required to make transportation arrangements to Miami, where festivalgoers would then board a flight to the purported private island in the Exumas. Once the event was abruptly cancelled, ticketholders were left to fend for themselves. Nevertheless, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, failed to warn attendees about the dangerous conditions awaiting them on the island. Defendants only “cancelled” the event on the morning of the first day—after thousands of attendees had already arrived and were stranded, without adequate food, water, or shelter.

11. The cancellation of the Fyre Festival did not leave just the Festival-goers in the Bahamas scrambling, but left the individuals who were planning to attend the Festival the second weekend scrambling as well. Considering all attendees of the second weekend were required to be in Miami, the attendees of the second weekend (outside of those that may live in South Florida) had airline tickets and, for many, hotel lodging in Miami that were now useless. Attendees and those that were planning to attend had also expended money through their cashless wristbands.

12. Outrage spread quickly on social media and throughout traditional news outlets, with the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times, the Washington Post, Vanity Fair, and others describing the dangerous events unfolding. Social media users even generated the hashtag “#fyrefraud” to share their harrowing experiences while in Defendants’ care.

13. This outrageous failure to prepare, coupled with Defendants’ deliberate falsehoods in promoting the island “experience,” demonstrates that the Fyre Festival was nothing more than a get-rich-quick scam. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, intended to fleece consumers for hundreds of millions of dollars by inducing them to fly to an island without food, shelter or water—and without regard to what might happen to them after that.

14. The Fyre Festival itself was merely a front for a massive financial fraud akin to a Ponzi scheme in which the founders and (potentially “Seed Series Investors”) in Fyre Media misappropriated funds from attendees. Indeed, in the weeks leading up to the Fyre Festival, when the company already knew the event was doomed for failure, Fyre Media which was minimally undercapitalized with “Series Seed” investors, was floating a completely inflated and shocking valuation of Fyre Media Inc. between $90 million and $105 million to additional “Series A” investor. Comcast Ventures considered investing $25 million in Fyre Media, which defendant Defendants apparently hoped would allow them to finance the Fyre Festival, but declined days before the event following due diligence review and the failure of Fyre to provide critical financial information.”³

15. After the Comcast Ventures deal fell through, a mere two weeks before the Festival was to begin, defendants McFarland and Atkins obtained multimillion dollar temporary financing for Fyre, that they each personally guaranteed, through an investor that required the company start repaying the loan before the Festival and from receipts of items associated with the Festival. This may have been motivation for Defendants, particularly McFarland and Atkins, who were personal guarantors of this sizable loan and who did not want to be straddled with repaying the loan, proceeding with the Fyre Festival knowing that they could not deliver what had been advertised. At or about this time, Defendants even increased the ticket prices, and pushed for consumers to make sizable purchases on their FyreBands, all the while knowing that they could not provide attendees with what had been represented to them, and with McFarland and Atkins acting primarily for their own interest and pockets. Clearly, the $90 - $105 million valuation placed on Fyre Media by Atkins and McFarland, its founders, was completely untethered to any financial reality and was not puffery but fraud. Yet, the ability of Fyre Media to float any substantial valuation at all was based on the continued cash flow it was receiving, in the weeks and days leading to the Festival, from attendees who were the unwitting pawns and ultimately victims in this criminal scheme. Whereas Ponzi schemes of the past rely on well-heeled individuals with disposable incomes, often times from elderly populations, here, Fyre Media and its founders, Atkins and McFarland and marketed their scheme to seemingly successful millennials as their mark.

16. Although it is evident that Fyre Media and its executives, Atkins, McFarland and Margolin, knew the Fyre Festival was going to be a colossal failure that would place the lives of attendees in danger for weeks if not months in advance, Fyre Media refused to cancel the Festival as it continued receiving funds from attendees which went toward repayment of the loan that Atkins and McFarland personally guaranteed, reducing their liability as guarantors and in the process unjustly enriching them.

17. Shortly after the Fyre Festival debacle, the FBI commenced an investigation and, in June 2017, defendant McFarland was arrested and charged with wire fraud in connection with a scheme to defraud investors in connection with the Fyre Festival.

18. At the time of the arrest and charge, acting Manhattan U.S. Attorney Joon Kim said: “As alleged, McFarland promised a 'life changing' music festival but in actuality delivered a disaster. McFarland allegedly presented fake documents to induce investors to put over a million dollars into his company and the fiasco called the Fyre Festival. Thanks to the investigative efforts of the FBI, McFarland will now have to answer for his crimes.” Assistant Director-in-Charge William F. Sweeney Jr. said: "Under McFarland's direction, Fyre Media created a promoter's marketplace for entertainment bidding. In addition to this initial business venture, McFarland went one step further in establishing a subsidiary of the company, Fyre Festival LLC. But in order to drive the success of both entities, as alleged, McFarland truly put on a show, misrepresenting the financial status of his businesses in order to rake in lucrative investment deals. In the end, the very public failure of the Fyre Festival signaled that something just wasn't right, as we allege in detail today."

19. McFarland entered into a plea agreement in March 2018, pleading guilty to two counts of fraud in connection with the Fyre Festival, which is likely to result in prison and a fine of up to $300,000. His sentencing was scheduled for June 21, 2018. The court, however, postponed the sentencing for a month after the government filed new and additional fraud charges against McFarland in early June 2018 arising from a new ticket scam that McFarland was conducting after he was arrested for fraud associated with the Fyre Festival, whereby he sold fake tickets to events through NYC VIP Access, another company he controlled, and attempted to hide his involvement by sending sale proceeds to other people's bank accounts. At his plea hearing, McFarland admitted in federal court to defrauding numerous investors in Fyre Media, while, among other things, using false financial documents to inflate the value of the company and his own net worth. He told the court: "I grossly underestimated the resources that would be necessary to hold an event of this magnitude. In an attempt to raise what I thought were needed funds, I lied to investors about various aspects of Fyre Media and my personal finances. Those lies included false documents and information." The criminal action against defendant McFarland is entitled USA v. McFarland, 17-cr-00600 (S.D.N.Y. 2017) (NRB).

20. Fyre Festival LLC, a subsidiary of defendant Fyre Media, controlled by Atkins and McFarland, was placed into bankruptcy in 2017. The bankruptcy proceeding is entitled Fyre Festival LLC, 17-bk-11883 (MG).

21. Plaintiffs bring this class action on behalf of all ticket buyers and/or festival attendees wronged by Defendants, and seek damages in excess of $100,000,000.00 on behalf of themselves and the Class.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

44. The Court has subject matter jurisdiction over this action pursuant to the Class Action Fairness Act, 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d) because there are more than 100 Class members and the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $5,000,000, exclusive of interest, fees, and costs, and at least one Class member is a citizen of a state different from Defendants.

45. Venue is proper in this District pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391 because at least one Defendant maintains its principal place of business in this District, and a substantial part of the events giving rise to Plaintiffs' claims took place within this judicial district, including Defendants' marketing and sale of the tickets and other items from this District. Defendant Atkins does not dispute that venue is proper in this District and agreed to transfer this action to this District.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The Founding, Marketing and Advertising of the Fyre Festival

46. Defendants, most particularly its founders and organizers, Atkins and McFarland, organized Fyre Festival as a luxurious, celebrity endorsed musical festival. According to the Fyre Festival's website, the Fyre Festival was an event conceived by McFarland and Atkins after development of “a partnership over mutual interest in technology, the ocean, and rap music.” McFarland and Atkins retained Grant Margolin, a self-proclaimed marketing prodigy, as Chief Marketing Officer, to actively work with them and they worked as the “FyreSquad”, to promote the Fyre Festival. Defendants started promoting the Fyre Festival in December 2016 through a social media blitz, using, among other things, Instagram, Twitter and Facebook, which created a facade that the Fyre Festival would be filled with exclusive culinary experiences and famous models on yachts on a private island once owned by Pablo Escobar.

47. Scheduled to take place over two weekends (April 28-30, 2017 and May 5-7, 2017), Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, touted and represented their festival as “the cultural experience of the decade,” featuring A-list entertainers like Blink-182, Migos, Rae Sremmurd, and Major Lazer, “first-class culinary experiences and a luxury atmosphere,”—all taking place on a “private island” in the Bahamas once owned by drug kingpin Pablo Escobar.⁴

48. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, invested enormous amounts of time and money in promoting and advertising their festival domestically and internationally. The Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland engaged hundreds of online “influencers” called “Fyre Starters”—including Kendall Jenner, Bella Hadid, and Emily Ratajkowski—to promote the Fyre Festival and use social media to generate ticket sales, and created extravagant websites and mock-ups of the luxurious villas in which attendees would be staying.

49. As set forth more fully in the Pitch Deck provided to Fyre Festival investors, incorporated by reference and attached hereto as Exhibit “A,” to “ignite” the Fyre Festival,

⁴ Fyre Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/fyrefestival/>.

Defendants “compiled 400 of the most influential personalities globally to launch a coordinated influencer marketing campaign.” These influential personalities were dubbed “Fyre Starters.”

50. To announce the Fyre Festival, at the request and direction of the Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, the Fyre Starters posted to their social media accounts an ambiguous orange tile. According to the Pitch Deck, this advertisement reached over 300 million people in 24 hours. The Pitch Deck was written, reviewed and approved by defendants Atkin, Margolin and McFarland.

51. Other posts from the Defendants, including Atkins, soon followed sensationalizing and promoting Fyre Festival as a two-weekend A-list experience with alcohol, fine dining and party-goers. Furthermore, attendees were promised activities such as boats and jet skis for rent, and musical performances by bands such as Blink-182 and Major Lazer. Ticketholders were also told they could “start each day with morning yoga and guided meditation on the beach,” while also enjoying “massages, henna tattooing, sound healing, chill-out sessions and a festive Bahamian junkanoo parade kicking off each weekend.” Descriptions of the food options pledged “a uniquely authentic island cuisine experience,” with “local seafood, Bahamian-style sushi and even a pig roast.”⁵

52. As part of the vast influencer marketing campaign, Defendants, including Atkins, partnered with or hired Kendall Jenner to announce the Fyre Festival’s first headliners, and paid her $250,000. Within five days, she amassed approximately 6 million unique impressions, leading to an exponential leap in website views and ticket purchases. The post featured models in bikinis walking along an idyllic white sand beach, and the caption of the post encouraged followers to “Get tix now” and to use Jenner’s “promo code” for “VIP access for [Jenner’s]

53. The advertisements from the vast influencer marketing campaign were widespread and directed toward consumers in all 50 states, the UK and globally.

54. Almost all of the influencers who shared the promotional videos and photos never noted the posts were actually advertisements—despite the fact that the Federal Trade Commission requires social media users to clearly and conspicuously disclose their relationships to brands.

55. Representations were also set forth in the FAQ section of Defendants' website. A copy of the FAQ section is incorporated by reference and attached hereto as Exhibit “B.” The website content was written, reviewed and approved by defendants Atkins, Margolin and McFarland wrote, reviewed and approved the website and its content.

56. As set forth in the attached FAQ, the following representations indicated that the Fyre Festival would comprise: • a culinary experience catered by celebrity chefs; • luxury eco-friendly domes and villas that will “feel just like a hotel” with the “comforts of home,” a depiction of which is incorporated by reference and attached hereto as Exhibit “C”; • musical bands that will be performing day and night; with an “all-star cast of performers, models, influencers, and thought leaders attending.”

57. Defendants, including Atkins, also created and provided a video advertisement that further underscored these representations. The video can be found at: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kkovBKfcSJ8>. Specifically, the video advertisement represented that the experience would entail “[t]he best in food, art, music and adventure.” Defendants’ marketed and promoted the Fyre Festival both nationally and internationally to raise ticket sales. Defendants Atkins, Margolin and McFarland wrote, reviewed and approved the video. Below are photos from the Fyre's Facebook promotional material, which was written, reviewed and approved by Defendants Atkins, Margolin and McFarland:

58. Defendant Atkins was the founder, funder, organizer, chief artistic leader and front and center promotor of the Fyre Festival. He was also a controlling owner and officer of Fyre Media and Fyre Festival LLC. In the aforesaid roles, he directed and was actively involved in policies and business strategy, including marketing, advertising and promotion content, strategy, and delivery. Atkins also drafted, reviewed and approved marketing content and delivery.

59. In addition, Defendant Atkins, as alleged above, is a celebrity rap musician and an influencer. As set forth above, Atkins has an extremely large and very strong following on Twitter and Instagram with over 200,000 thousands followers on Twitter, and 575,000 followers on Instagram and a large group of recognizable influencer friends. He attempts through his social media posts to create a world that people want to be a part of, creating a level of FOMO (fear of missing out) culture, making people want to be a part of his inner circle.

60. Advertisers adore influencers as influencers create brand awareness and preference, sway buying decisions and draw in consumers. The term influencer marketing is sometimes defined as “marketing that identifies and activates individuals who can sway the brand preferences, buying decisions, and loyalty of the broader population.” On social platforms, the term typically describes “the process in which companies compensate celebrities, social media ‘stars,’ or industry experts to create content on behalf of brands or provide endorsements for brands.” Influencer marketing accounts for the majority of marketing in certain industries such as the musical industry. Instagram is the top, or one of the overall top, social media channels for influencer marketing.⁶

61. Though social media, the consuming public knew that Atkins, a celebrity musician, and influencer was a founder, organizer and promoter of Fyre Festival. Therefore, when Fyre Media and/or Fyre Festival or those persons or entities, acting on behalf of those entities, marketed the Fyre Festival and made representations about the Festival, the public viewed those representations as coming from Atkins. The public viewed the Fyre Festival and Atkins as synonymous and referred to the Festival as Ja Rule’s Festival. After the Festival failed, several hundreds of persons on the Internet, who knew from Atkins’ social media posts about the Festival that he was the organizer, blamed Atkins for the failed event.

62. In addition to Atkins being responsible for marketing done by or on behalf of Fyre Media, Fyre Festival LLC and founder of the Festival, he also personally marketed and promoted the Fyre Festival on his own social media, and elsewhere, boasting the Festival’s greatness and representing how amazing the Festival experience was going to be. An example of one of his Instagram posts promoting the Fyre Festival and boasting about its greatness, appears below, stating: “Fyre Festival looks set to be the biggest FOMO-inducing event of 2017.” “FOMO” means “fear of missing out.”

63. As alleged above, when a celebrity and influencer such as Atkins creates a FOMO culture and states on his social media that the Fyre Festival is set to be the “biggest FOMO-inducing event of 2017” he is singlehandedly, and in the seconds that it takes to post on social media, creating a marketing buzz that is the equivalent of what advertising agencies endeavored to do thirty (30) years ago through millions of dollars of air and radio ads over extended periods of time.

64. Another example of a social media post of Defendant Atkins making a representation about the Fyre Festival is a statement that he posted on his Twitter account on April, 27, 2017, ONE day before the event was to begin, stating: “The stage is set!!! In less than 24 hours, the first annual Fyre Festival begins. #festivallife.”

Defendant Atkins knew, at the time of this post, that the representation in the social media post was false as the stage was not set as the performers had either been told by Defendants, including Atkins, not to attend or had cancelled.

65. Upon information and belief, based upon publicly available new reports, Defendant Atkins deleted numerous social media posts about the Fyre Festival after the Festival was cancelled.

66. Defendant Atkins was also directly involved in working with the Bahamian government to obtain a site for the Fyre Festival, knew months before the planned event that there was no infrastructure for the site and that it was unsuitable and unsafe for the event. After the event failed, the Bahamian government banned him from organizing any future events in the Bahamas.

67. Defendants, with the active involvement and direction of its owners/officers Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, also represented the following about the Fyre Festival through websites, social media, promotional videos and other advertising, and through Instagram accounts:

- a. The cultural experience of the decade.⁷
- b. Pusha T, Tyga, and Desiigner will be joining Major Lazer, Disclosure, Blink-182, Migos, and Lil Yachty—and the models—Kendall Jenner, Alessandra Ambrosio, Bella Hadid, Hailey Baldwin, Emily Ratajkowski, Elsa Hosk, Lais Ribeiro, and Hannah Ferguson, to name a few...⁸

Compass Cay Marina. You read that right, sharks. There are about 30 of them that have become domesticated over time and the owner invites you to get in to “pet” them. So why not give caution a middle finger and jump in? Everyone else is doing it.¹⁸

- l. You can plan an excursion with a local dive shop or pack your own mask and snorkel, either way, it’s an underwater kingdom unlike any other.¹⁹
- m. A brand-new luxury boutique hotel opened its doors, transforming this remote cay that resides just off the tip of Great Exuma. It’s small, only 12 rooms, with a commitment to leaving as little of a footprint as possible. There are morning yoga sessions overlooking the private beach, a spa, and two restaurants serving distinctly Bahamian cuisine like conch fritters and freshly caught fish. Hop on a private boat that will shuttle you over, and then enjoy pristine white sand beaches all to yourself.²⁰
- o. While there are many upsides to owning your own boat, in the Exumas, the ability to anchor down on your own private sandbar has got to be at the top of the list. There are lots of them in these parts, scattered about the pristine turquoise waters. Musha Cay has one of the more popular sandbars, which means you’ll have company, and many locals or repeat visitors keep their favorite sandbar on the down low, but do some poking around and you’re sure to find a spot worthy of an afternoon and; though these islands are part of the Bahamas, this scattered string of pearls is way more barefoot and bronzed than cruise ships and coconut cocktails.²¹

The Disastrous Fyre Festival

68. Upon arriving at the Fyre Festival, Plaintiffs and attendees were surprised to see that the experience promised by Defendants fell substantially below the advertised expectations as shown in the photos below:

69. As widely reported on social media and through news outlets, the Fyre Festival was a disaster immediately upon the attendees' arrival. The event was cancelled, there was no concert, and concert-goers' luggage was unceremoniously dumped from shipping containers and left for them to rifle through in order to find their personal belongings:

70. Once there, the accommodations were clustered “FEMA tents” (pictured below right), wholly exposed to the elements, rather than the luxurious villas described in Defendants’ promotional materials (pictured below left):

71. With only unsecured tents as accommodations, rather than the promised villas, attendees had no secure area to store valuables and other personal items:

72. Similarly, the “world-class cuisine” was nowhere to be found, replaced by meager rations that were in dangerously short supply:

73. Even more troublingly, festival staff were nowhere to be found to address attendees’ concerns. Defendants had advised consumers that the island would be “honoring American Standards for medical safety,” and a “medical tent on the island with professional medical providers.” This could not be further from the truth, other than that there was a sign for First Aid that was located inside a garage with only boxes, chairs and a water cooler. No medical team was present:

74. Faced with the complete lack of even the most basic amenities, as well as no assistance from Defendants, festival attendees began to panic:

75. Predictably, attendees began attempting to leave the island en masse, but found themselves trapped—even locked inside an airport awaiting delayed flights:

76. Unfortunately, festival-goers were unable to escape the unfolding disaster because of their reliance upon Defendants for transportation, and because Defendants promoted the Fyre Festival as a cashless, using the cashless FyreBand at the Festival rather than bringing any cash.

77. In another string of comments from attendees, numerous complaints were reported sharing a similar theme of false representations by the Defendants:

- a. “Not one thing that was promised on the website was delivered,” said Shivi Kumar, 33, who works in technology sales in New York, and came with a handful of friends expecting the deluxe “lodge” package for which they had paid $3,500: four king size beds and a chic living room lounge. Instead Ms. Kumar and her crew were directed to a tent encampment. Some tents had beds, but some were still unfurnished. Directed by a festival employee to “grab a tent,” attendees started running, she said. “People were stealing beds out of other tents,” she said. “It was just chaos. Nobody ever came in to check us in to our accommodations, if you can call it that, so they had no idea who was there and who wasn’t.” At one point in the evening, Ms. Kumar said, staff members dumped a bunch of unopened containers — like “Amazon shipment boxes” — at the site, and instructed concertgoers to rifle through them for anything that was missing from their tents. “It was everything from, like, bongos to floaties to sleeping bags,” she said.²²

²² https://www.nytimes.com/2017/04/28/arts/music/fyre-festival-ja-rule-bahamas.html?_r=0

- b. Another attendee Trevor DeHass told ABC News that despite the Fyre Festival being promoted as an all-inclusive upscale weekend, he said that he and his friends were served two slices of bread, a slice of cheese and a small salad for dinner Thursday.²³
- c. “So Fyre Fest is a complete disaster. Mass chaos. No organization. No one knows where to go. There are no villas, just a disaster tent city,” said ticket holder William N. Finley IV, who has been documenting it all on Twitter.²⁴
- d. Another guest added: “The “gourmet cuisine” this weekend was included in the ticket cost. We are being fed salads and ham and cheese sandwiches out of this tent.”²⁵
- e. “That awkward moment when you think you're going to a music festival on a private island but it's actually the Hunger Games,” added a third.²⁶
- f. “The barrage of complaints left the Caribbean’s Fyre Festival trending worldwide, with Twitter users comparing the experience to a “horror movie” plot.”²⁷

Defendants Knew of the Falsity of Their Representations about the Fyre Festival

78. The representations made and advertising promoted by Defendants about the Fyre Festival were false.

79. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, had been aware for months that their festival was dangerously under-equipped and posed a serious danger to anyone in attendance. They had no planned medical services, few showers, no electricity, few porta potties, and none of the activities they had promised.

80. Individuals employed by Defendants have since acknowledged that no infrastructure for food service or accommodations was in place as recently as a month before the event and that the few contractors who had been retained by Defendants were refusing to work because they had not been paid.

81. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, knew that the event site did not have the proper infrastructure and would have to be built from the ground up. There had been no infrastructure in place for electricity (let alone promised wifi) or sanitation. As alleged herein, upon the arrival of guests to the island of Great Exuma for the first weekend, the island was lacking basic amenities and was covered in dirt. There were no luxurious accommodations previously promised by Defendants. The luxury domes were not being built, and instead were being replaced by tents and guests had to sleep in tents with wet blankets. There were no communal showers or bathrooms as promised; instead there were porta potties (only about one for every 200 yards) that were knocked down and only three showers although there were hundreds of people arriving. Additionally, although Defendants had promoted the event as being on a private island, Great Exuma is not a private island. The event was held on a defunct landholding on Great Exuma that was semi industrial and semi manmade.

82. The celebrity chefs had notified Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, that they would not be appearing, and thus food was going to be served out of makeshift tents and included such items as bread and cheese sandwiches, side-salads, and pasta; clearly not the culinary experience that had been marketed by Defendants.

83. Several weeks prior to the start of the Fyre Festival, Defendants approached Starr Catering Group to execute a food menu for festival. However, even after Starr Catering flew out to the Bahamas and created a plan detailing every meal, they were informed by the Defendants that a six-figure meal plan was out of budget. Before the event, Defendants terminated their contract with Starr to provide food for the Festival, however they never informed attendees about this. Defendants still portrayed to attendees that the Festival would be catered by Starr.²⁸

84. Bands had notified the Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, that they would not be appearing due to the lack of progress, none of which was reported publicly by any of the Defendants despite all Defendants' knowledge of these facts. The bands' decisions were likely based upon the fact that the Defendants had not even secured a stage for the concert. There were also promises by all Defendants of security with local law enforcement, private contractors, and even the Bahamian army; none of which had been secured. In fact, there were ultimately reports of numerous festival-goers being mugged, robbed, and otherwise terrorized by locals who were otherwise met with no resistance.

85. None of the models who promoted the event, such as Bella Hadid, were on the island. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, knowingly and falsely represented to attendees that A-list artists and models were in fact coming to perform at the Fyre Festival. Defendants were obviously more concerned with promoting gloss ads featuring supermodels than securing the essential vendors to execute a food plan for attendees.

86. Defendants, particularly Atkins, McFarland and Margolin, were aware of the problems before the event and that their representations about the Festival were false. Troublingly, before Plaintiffs and other ticketholders had arrived, these Defendants urged artists to not attend due to the dangerous and uninhabitable conditions that were present at the event venue.²⁹

87. Defendant Atkins was certainly aware that the representations about the Fyre Festival were untrue. At least a month prior the event, in March 2017, defendant Atkins arrived for a "site visit." However most of his time was spent on a yacht near the supposed Festival site

²⁹ <http://www.businessinsider.com/fyre-festival-organizers-told-celebrities-not-to-attend-2017-5>

based upon his Instagram posts.³⁰ Upon his return from this “site visit,” he shared whatever he saw (or didn’t see) with the other Defendants.

88. Meanwhile, before the commencement of the event, the event planners were attempting to put together a game plan and a budget. With so little having been prepared ahead of time, the official verdict was that it would take $50 million to pull off.

89. Marketers for the event, engaged by Defendants, repeatedly made Defendants Atkins, Margolin and McFarland aware that the event would not be up to the standard they had advertised, something Defendants already knew or should have known and certainly could have discovered long before the marketing began. The best idea, the marketing team said, in or about March 2017, to Defendant, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, would be to roll everyone’s tickets over to 2018 and start planning for the next year immediately. They had a meeting with Defendants Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, in March 2017, within a month before the planned event, to deliver the news, wherein McFarland, Atkins and Margolin rejected or ignored the warning and the marketing team or McFarland, Atkins or Margolin stated, “Let’s just do it and be legends, man.” Defendants approved the budget and marketing for the event was to proceed even though Defendants knew that they could not deliver. In the face of this knowledge, Defendants continued to sell tickets and merchandise to unwitting consumers.

90. Defendants Atkins and McFarland and, upon information and belief, Defendant Margolin, even toasted in or about March 2017 when it was known the Festival would not be up to par, “To living like movie stars, partying like rock stars, and f like porn stars.”³¹ Upon information and belief, this toast took place on a yacht in March 2017 when Atkins was engaging in a site visit of the Festival where he certainly knew that the “stage was not set” or going to be “set” to deliver the Festival as represented. Yet, Defendants continued to sell tickets and merchandise.

91. Defendant McFarland also knew that the Festival could not proceed as represented, but chose nonetheless to proceed. This goes along with McFarland’s past conduct as he has a “history of overpromising” in his previous business ventures. For example, after McFarland sold tickets to the musical Hamilton for $430, the tickets were cancelled at the last minute. In a complaint to the Better Business Bureau, one customer seeking a refund reported getting no response to multiple queries over a month and a half. McFarland also scammed customers through Magnises, yet another company that he controlled, which provided online concierge services to urban events. These circumstances are the same. Defendant Margolin, as alleged above, who was the lead marketing chief for the event, had also been warned and knew that the event could not proceed as represented.

92. On or about April 10, 2017, a few weeks before the Fyre Festival, an entity known as EHL Funding LLC, extended a three million dollar loan for funding of the Fyre Festival and defendants Atkins and McFarland each signed personal guarantees, personally guarantying the loan. Payments on the loan were to commence on April 14, 2017, and on that date and each week thereafter, 40 percent of the receipts from the Fyre Festival were to be paid to EHL Funding. At or around of the time of the loan and personal guarantees given by Atkins and McFarland, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, pushed consumers to load up more and more money on the cashless FyreBands. Defendants Atkins and McFarland, personal guarantors on this loan, and founders, organizers and promoters of the Fyre Festival, clearly knew the Fyre Festival was under mountains of debt, in trouble, that their own finances were on the line, and could not proceed as represented. The loan was not fully repaid and EHL Funding commenced a lawsuit that is still pending to enforce the loan and guarantees. The action is entitled EHL Funding LLC v. William McFarland, etc., 652546/17 (Supreme Ct., N.Y. Co).

93. Nevertheless, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, not only failed to notify Plaintiffs, or any other consumers, that there were issues with the Fyre Festival moving forward or warn attendees about the dangerous conditions awaiting them on the island, they even more vigorously marketed the event, raised prices and encouraged consumers to load up money on their cashless wrist bands. They also advised performers not to attend the Festival, but did not tell the Plaintiffs or the Class not to attend.

94. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, only “cancelled” the event on the morning of the first day—after thousands of attendees had already arrived and were stranded, without food, water, or shelter.

95. While Plaintiffs are aware that Defendants made overtures shortly after the event regarding refunds and that Defendant Atkins stated on Twitter shortly after the event that “he was working to make it right by making sure everyone is refunded,” Class members’ damages exceed the face value of their ticket packages by many orders of magnitude.

96. Defendant Atkins publicly took responsibility for the Fyre Festival and its failure and posted mea culpas on his Twitter account about the debacle.

97. On April 28, 2017, the day of the failed Fyre Festival, Defendant Atkins made the following statement on his Twitter account on social media: “We are working right now on getting everyone [off] the island SAFE that is my immediate concern... I will make a statement soon I’m heartbroken at this moment my partners and I wanted this to be an amazing event it was NOT A SCAM as everyone is reporting I don’t know how everything went so left but I’m working to make it right by making sure everyone is refunded... I truly apologize as this is NOT

MY FAULT... but I'm taking responsibility I'm deeply sorry to everyone who was inconvenienced by this..." A copy of this Tweet is incorporated by reference and attached hereto as Exhibit "D."

98. On April 30, 2017, Defendant Atkins made the following statement on his Twitter account on social media: "Relieved to share that all guest [sic] are safe, and have been sent the form to apply for a refund. Our deepest apologies..." A copy of this Tweet is incorporated by reference and attached hereto as Exhibit "E."

99. Defendant Atkins' mea culpas, apologies and statements that he was going to take responsibility for the failed Fyre Festival and offer refunds, together with his control over the corporate entities and his active and direct involvement in marketing and other aspects of the Fyre Festival, evidences that he had a duty to Plaintiffs that he did not fulfill and that he should be responsible for the fraud and the other torts alleged herein that committed against the Plaintiffs.

100. Defendant Atkins also admitted that he engaged in false advertising in connection with the Fyre Festival as he made the following statement relating to the Fyre Festival. "That's not fraud, that's not fraud, False advertising, maybe — not fraud."

101. Plaintiffs and other Class members sustained damages as a direct and proximate result of Defendants' negligence and other wrongful conduct and omissions in connection with the sale of tickets to and other items associated with the Fyre Festival, and promotion of the Fyre Festival.

Plaintiffs' Experience

102. Plaintiffs and other Class members relied on Defendants' misrepresentations and omissions regarding the experience and accommodations. Plaintiffs, the Class, and the Subclasses (as defined below) have been damaged by Defendants' deceptive, negligent, and unfair conduct and wrongful inaction in that they purchased tickets for, and other items associated with, the Fyre Festival, that they would not have otherwise purchased, had Defendants not misrepresented the experience of attending the Fyre Festival or warned them of the potential harms caused by attending the event.

103. Plaintiff Jung purchased a Fyre Festival ticket package from Defendants for approximately $1000, and further incurred approximately $1000 in additional costs associated with the cancellation of the Fyre Festival. Plaintiff Jung regrets buying a ticket package to the Fyre Festival.

104. Plaintiff Mainero purchased a festival ticket from Defendants for $400, deposited $500 on the cashless wristband, and further incurred approximately $1,500 in travel expenses after the Fyre Festival, including flights to and from Miami, multiple day hotel stays in Miami after the Fyre Festival before she could fly home to Colorado, and meal, taxi and other expenses while in Miami.

105. When Plaintiff Mainero arrived at the island, however, she did not arrive at a luxury festival. After a few hours, there was chaos. Attendees were screaming and crying out of fear. It was pitch black and attendees were provided with only tents to sleep in. There were no villas. Some tents had beds and others did not. Many of the beds did not have bedding or pillows. Most were soaking wet due to the rain storm the previous day. Defendant McFarland was standing on a table yelling, just find a tent and we will figure it out. Plaintiff Mainero slept in a tent with her girlfriends, fellow festival attendees, who feared for their safety. Plaintiff Mainero and other attendees also had not been permitted to keep their luggage with them. Plaintiff Mainero therefore did not have access to her luggage on the day of arrival, was unable to use her sunscreen and was badly burned by the sun. After Plaintiff Mainero obtained her luggage, she kept passport with her in the tent. Upon waking the next morning, guests were rushed to the buses to leave the Fyre Festival, leaving Plaintiff Mainero without adequate time to retrieve items from her tent, including her United States passport. Her passport was ultimately stolen and she had great difficulty getting through customs to enter the United States. Plaintiff Mainero regrets buying a ticket package to the Fyre Festival.

106. Plaintiff Herlihy bought a ticket package for $1,027 from Defendants which was supposed to include a ticket to the Fyre Festival, roundtrip airfare to the Bahamas from Miami, Florida, luxury accommodations and food, and access to a number of activities, including musical performances.

107. When Plaintiff Herlihy arrived at the island, however, he saw total chaos. None of the musical performances or activities were available. There were no communal bathrooms or showers, but instead only three showers and a porta potty every 200 yards, which was woefully insufficient for the large number of festival attendees. The food was unappetizing and there were no on-site medical services. Additionally, there were no other basic amenities like soap, sunscreen and shampoo, and no electricity.

108. Plaintiff Herlihy arrived on Thursday night and departed the next evening. He had to spend the weekend in Miami where he had to incur additional expenses on food, which were supposed to be covered by the ticket package. He had also deposited $900 onto the cashless wristband that was supposed to be used to pay for activities and beverages on the island during the Fyre Festival, and he did not have access to such monies after he left the island. Plaintiff Herlihy regrets buying a ticket package to the Fyre Festival.

109. Plaintiff Lauriello bought a ticket package from Defendants for $1,027 which was supposed to include a ticket to the Fyre Festival, roundtrip airfare to the Bahamas from Miami, Florida, luxury accommodations and food, and access to a number of activities, including musical performances.

110. When Plaintiff Lauriello arrived at the island, however, he saw mayhem. None of the musical performances or activities were available. He also found that there were no communal bathrooms or showers, but instead a few porta potties that were filthy, and woefully insufficient for the large number of festival attendees. The food was unappetizing and there were no on-site medical services. Additionally, there were no other basic amenities like soap, sunscreen and shampoo, and no electricity.

111. Plaintiff Lauriello also arrived on Thursday night and then departed the next evening. He had to spend the weekend in Miami where he had to incur additional expenses on food, which were supposed to be covered by the ticket package. He had also deposited $1,000 on the cashless wristband that was supposed to be used to pay for activities and beverages on the island during the Fyre Festival, and he did not have access to such monies after he left the island. Unfortunately for Plaintiff Lauriello, his personal effects were stolen, including headphones, jeans and sneakers because Defendants failed to provide any security. Plaintiff Lauriello regrets buying a ticket package to the Fyre Festival.

112. Plaintiff Jutla purchased a Fyre festival ticket package from Defendants for $1,940, deposited $600 on the cashless wristband, and further incurred $930 in travel expenses, including flights to and from Miami and hotel stays in Miami before and after the Fyre Festival. Plaintiff Jutla incurred additional costs in additional airfare back to New York and hotel costs after Fyre Festival was cancelled. Plaintiff Jutla regrets buying a ticket package to the Fyre Festival.

113. Plaintiff Wilson purchased a festival ticket from Defendants for $500, deposited $200 on a cashless wristband, and further incurred approximately $420 in hotel expenses and approximately $610 in travel expenses, including flights to and from Chicago to and from Miami. Plaintiff Wilson attended the Fyre Festival and the event was not the luxurious experience as advertised. Upon arrival on Thursday night, the hired driver of a bus (rather than a luxury transfer as advertised) drove Plaintiff Wilson and her friends - a bachelorette party – around for a while and eventually stopped in a parking lot. When she and her group asked him why they were stopping, he said he was told by the event founders to “stall them.” Plaintiff Wilson and her friends could not find their luggage. Nor were there beautiful villas. Instead, Plaintiff Wilson and her friends found hundreds of tents lined up. Some of the tents were barren; others had simple bed frames and mattresses. Rather than luxury accommodations, there were two public outdoor showers in trailers and a couple of portable toilets. There was no water station. Attendees were not provided with locks to secure their valuables. There were not enough tents for all of the attendees and theft of tents and looting was rampant. The tents of Plaintiff Wilson and her friends were missing privacy flaps. Plaintiff Wilson and her friends could not leave their tents at the same time for fear of their tent being taken, so they took turns leaving to get food. The food was not gourmet food, but cheese sandwiches. At night, there were no lights. People were huddled around the only generator source to try to keep warm. Plaintiff Wilson and her friends headed back to the airport that evening but the wait to leave the Bahamas was extraordinarily long and her group did not depart until approximately 1:00 p.m. the next day. She and her friends, waiting for their flights back to the United States, were locked into the airport waiting room at the airport for several hours with little to no air circulating and then stuck on the plane for several hours. During the time that Plaintiff Wilson and her friends were at the airport and on the plane, they were without food or water. Plaintiff Wilson regrets buying a ticket package to the Fyre Festival.

114. Plaintiff Pittas purchased a Fyre Festival ticket package from Defendants for $1,940, deposited $600 on the cashless wristband, and further incurred approximately $2,950 in travel expenses, including flights to and from London to New York, New York to Miami, and hotel stays in Miami before and after the Fyre Festival. Plaintiff Pittas incurred additional costs in airfare back to New York and hotel costs after Fyre Festival was cancelled. Plaintiff Pittas regrets buying a ticket package to the Fyre Festival.

CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

115. Plaintiffs bring this action, on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, as a class action pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b) (2) and (b) (3), as applicable, and (c)(4). Upon information and belief, Defendants sold thousands of Fyre Festival tickets. The advertising and representations for the Fyre Festival tickets and associated items were uniform throughout the class period.

116. Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b) (2) and (b) (3), as applicable, and (c)(4), Plaintiffs seek certification of the following global class: All persons who purchased tickets to and/or attended the Fyre Festival (the “Global Class”). Alternatively, Plaintiffs seek certification of the following nationwide class: All residents of the United States of America who purchased a ticket to and/or attended the Fyre Festival. (the “Nationwide Class”) (the “Global Class” and “Nationwide Class” shall be referred to as the “Class”).

117. Pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(2) and (b)(3), as applicable, and (c)(4), Plaintiffs seek certification on behalf subclasses for California, Colorado, Illinois, New York, and the UK, defined as follows:

(a) California Subclass: All California residents who purchased a ticket to and/or attended the Fyre Festival. (“California Subclass” or “California Subclass Member(s)”).

(b) Colorado Subclass: All Colorado residents who purchased a ticket to and/or attended the Fyre Festival. (“Colorado Subclass” or “Colorado Subclass Member(s)”).

(c) Illinois Subclass: All Illinois residents who purchased a ticket to and/or attended the Fyre Festival. (“Illinois Subclass” or “Illinois Subclass Member(s)”).

(d) New York Subclass: All New York residents who purchased a ticket to and/or attended the Fyre Festival. (“New York Subclass” or “New York Subclass Member(s)”).

(e) UK Subclass: All residents of the United Kingdom who purchased a ticket to and/or attended the Fyre Festival. (“UK Subclass” or “UK Subclass Member(s)”).

The California, Colorado, Illinois, New York and UK Subclasses shall collectively be referred to as the “Subclasses.”

118. Excluded from the Class and Subclasses are persons who purchased the tickets for purposes of resale; any entity in which Defendants have a controlling interest, is a parent or subsidiary, or which is controlled by Defendants, as well as the officers, directors, affiliates, legal representatives, heirs, predecessors, successors, and assigns of Defendants. Also excluded are the judges and court personnel in this case and any members of their immediate families. Plaintiffs reserve the right to redefine the proposed Class and the Subclasses if discovery and further investigation reveal that the Class and Subclasses should be expanded or otherwise modified. Plaintiffs reserve the right to establish additional subclasses as appropriate.

119. This action is brought, and may properly be maintained, as a class action under Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 23 because there is a well-defined community of interest in the litigation and the proposed class is easily ascertainable. This action satisfies the predominance, typicality, numerosity, superiority, and adequacy requirements of these provisions.

(a) Numerosity: The Class and Subclasses is so numerous that the individual joinder of all members is impractical under the circumstances of this case. While the exact number of Class and Subclasses members is unknown to Plaintiffs at this time, upon information and belief, thousands of people purchased tickets for, and/or attended, the Fyre Festival.

(b) Commonality: Common questions of law and fact exist as to all members of the plaintiff class and predominate over any questions that affect only individual members of the Class and Subclasses. The common questions of law and fact include, but are not limited to:

(i) Whether Defendants made false representations about the Fyre Festival, including misrepresenting the musical acts that would perform at the Fyre Festival and concealed, suppressed and omitted material facts, such as the island's inadequate infrastructure and the lack of preparedness of accommodating persons at the Fyre Festival, and whether Defendants created an unsafe environment for attendees;

(ii) If so, whether Defendants knew or should have known that their representations were false or were reckless as to their veracity at the time they were made and their omissions material;

(iii) Whether Defendants negligently misrepresented various facts regarding the Fyre Festival or were otherwise negligent or grossly negligent; and

(iv) Whether Defendants breached any implied or explicit contractual obligations to ticket buyers and to attendees of Fyre Festival;

(v) Whether Defendants violated various consumer protection statutes;

(vi) Whether Defendants created an unsafe environment at the Fyre Festival; and

(vii) Whether, as a result of Defendants' misconduct as alleged herein, Plaintiffs and the Class and Subclasses are entitled to damages, restitution and/or other remedies to which Class and Subclasses members are entitled as a result of Defendants' wrongful conduct, and, if so, the amount and nature of such relief.

(c) Typicality: Plaintiffs' claims are typical of the claims of the Class and Subclasses. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses sustained damages arising out of Defendants' wrongful and fraudulent conduct as alleged herein.

(d) Adequacy: Plaintiffs will fairly and adequately protect the interests of the Class and Subclasses. Plaintiffs have no interest that is adverse to the interests of the other Class and Subclass Members.

(e) Superiority: A class action is superior to other available means for the fair and efficient adjudication of this controversy. Because individual joinder of all members of the class is impractical, class action treatment will permit a large number of similarly situated persons to prosecute their common claims in a single forum simultaneously, efficiently, and without unnecessary duplication of effort and expense that numerous individual actions would engender. The expenses and burdens of individual litigation would make it difficult or impossible for individual members of the class to redress the wrongs done to them, while important public interests will be served by addressing the matter as a class action. The cost to and burden on the court system of adjudication of individualized litigation would be substantial, and substantially more than the costs and burdens of a class action. Class litigation would also prevent the potential for inconsistent or contradictory judgments.

CAUSES OF ACTION

FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION (Negligence)

120. Plaintiffs repeat, reallege, and incorporate by reference each of the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth herein.

121. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Defendants.

122. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, owed duties to Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses as paying customers and attendees of the Fyre Festival to use reasonable care to provide true, reliable and safe accommodations of food, water, shelter, security and medical supervision at the Fyre Festival. These duties existed because Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclass were the foreseeable and probable victims of the inadequate and unsafe environment that Defendants created. Defendants' duties also arose from their position of having unique and superior knowledge about the environment at the Fyre Festival and they had a duty to Plaintiffs to not place them in a dangerous situation on an island without adequate food and housing and a ready way to get off the island. These duties are independent of and extraneous to any contractual obligations that may exist between Fyre Media and Plaintiffs.

123. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, breached their duties to Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses by failing to provide reasonable accommodations of food, water, shelter, security and medical supervision at the Fyre Festival, by failing to use reasonable care in properly organizing Fyre Festival with the proper vendors, by placing attendees into a dangerous environment, and by knowingly making false representations and concealing suppressing and omitting material information about the experience when the truth of the falsity was known.

124. Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclass suffered foreseeable pecuniary and non-pecuniary damages associated with the Fyre Festival.

125. But for Defendants' wrongful and negligent breach of their duties owed to Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses, Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses would not have suffered pecuniary and non-pecuniary damages.

126. As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' negligence, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses incurred pecuniary and non-pecuniary damages, such as pain and suffering and emotional distress, in an amount to be determined at trial.

SECOND CAUSE OF ACTION
(Gross Negligence)

127. Plaintiffs repeat, reallege, and incorporate by reference each of the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth herein.

128. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Defendants.

129. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, owed duties to Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses as paying customers and attendees of the Fyre Festival to use reasonable care to provide true, reliable and safe accommodations of food, water, shelter, security and medical supervision at the Fyre Festival. These duties existed because Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses were the foreseeable and probable victims of the inadequate and unsafe environment that Defendants created. Defendants' duties also arose from their unique position of having unique and superior knowledge about the environment at the Fyre Festival and they had a duty to Plaintiffs to not place them in a dangerous situation on an island without adequate food and housing and a ready way to get off the island. These duties are independent of and extraneous to any contractual obligations that may exist between Fyre Media and Plaintiffs.

130. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, breached their duties to Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses by failing to provide reasonable accommodations of food, water, shelter, security and medical supervision at the Fyre Festival, by failing to use reasonable care in properly organizing Fyre Festival with the proper vendors, by placing attendees into a dangerous environment, and by knowingly making false representations and concealing suppressing and omitting material information about the experience when the truth of the falsity was known.

131. Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses suffered foreseeable pecuniary and non-pecuniary damages associated with the Fyre Festival.

132. But for Defendants' wrongful and grossly negligent breach of their duties owed to the Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses, Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses would not have suffered pecuniary and non-pecuniary damages.

133. Defendants' acts and omissions were wanton and in disregard of the rights of Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses. Defendants knowingly and deliberately placed Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses in an inadequate or unsafe environment without adequate provisions.

134. As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' gross negligence, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses, incurred pecuniary and non-pecuniary damages, such as pain and suffering and emotional distress, in an amount to be determined at trial.

THIRD CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraud)

135. Plaintiffs repeat, reallege, and incorporate by reference each of the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth herein.

136. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Defendants.

137. As alleged herein, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, made numerous false representations of material fact with regard to the Fyre Festival.

138. Specifically, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, represented, among other things, that: (1) the Fyre Festival would take place on a private island, (2) the island was previously owned by Pablo Escobar, (3) the Fyre Festival would have a luxury atmosphere and accommodations, (4) the line of up music guests were filled with celebrity performers, (5) the cuisine would be first class, and (6) the Fyre Festival would be filled with famous models on yachts.

139. Defendants' representations were false when made.

140. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, knew these representations were false when made, and at the time of making these representations, Defendants knew that they could not and would not provide the goods and services that they had represented to Plaintiffs and consumers. The representations made by the Defendants were made with a preconceived and undisclosed intention to not perform them.

141. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, intended that the representations would induce the consuming public, including Plaintiffs and the Class and Subclasses, to act on these representations and to, among other things, purchase tickets to Fyre Festival and incur other related expenses in connection with the Fyre Festival.

142. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, also concealed, suppressed and omitted material facts to the Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses, that Defendants' had a duty to ticketholders and attendees to disclose, including, among other things, about the island's inadequate infrastructure, the lack of preparedness of accommodations and activities at the Fyre Festival, and that Defendants had created an unsafe environment at the Fyre Festival.

143. Defendants, including Atkins in particular, as chief promotor, celebrity and influencer, owner, founder, director and officer, and financial backer, stood in the very sort of relationship that gives rise to a duty, namely a close or fiduciary or fiduciary like relationship where Defendants, including Atkins, were inducing consumers to travel to a remote island for a luxurious festival in reliance that there would be food, shelter, musical acts and celebrities, only to find themselves with no music, no infrastructure, limited food, FEMA like tents and stranded.

144. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses acted in reliance on the false, material representations and omissions made by Defendants, by buying tickets and merchandise associated with the Fyre Festival, which caused them injury. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses would not have purchased tickets, deposited money onto the FyreBands and/or expended any other money in connection with the Fyre Festival if they had known that they were not going to be receiving the accommodations, amenities, security and access to activities that they were told they were going to experience at the Fyre Festival.

145. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses were consequently injured when Fyre Festival was abruptly cancelled due to under-preparation and inadequate facilities and they did not receive and were not going to be receiving the accommodations, amenities, security and access to activities that they were told they were going to experience at the Fyre Festival.

146. As a result of Defendants' fraudulent representations and omissions, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses were damaged in an amount to be proven at trial.

FOURTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Negligent Misrepresentation)

147. Plaintiffs repeat, reallege, and incorporate by reference each of the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth herein.

148. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Defendants.

149. As alleged herein, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, made numerous false representations of material fact with regard to Fyre Festival.

150. Specifically, Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, represented, among other things, that: (1) the Fyre Festival would take place on a private island, (2) the island was previously owned by Pablo Escobar, (3) the Fyre Festival would have a luxury atmosphere and accommodations, (4) the line of up music guests were filled with celebrity performers, (5) the cuisine would be first class, and (6) the Fyre Festival would be filled with famous models on yachts.

151. Defendants' representations were false at the time that they were made

152. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, were negligent in making the representations because they should they should have known the representations were false. Defendants should have known that they could not and would not provide the goods and services that they had represented to Plaintiffs and consumers.

153. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, intended for the representations to induce the consuming public, including Plaintiffs and the Class and Subclasses, to act on these representations and to, among other things, purchase tickets to Fyre Festival and incur other related expenses in connection with the Fyre Festival.

154. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses acted in reliance on the false, material representations made by Defendants, by buying tickets and merchandise associated with the Fyre Festival, which caused them injury. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses would not have purchased tickets, deposited money onto the FyreBands and/or expended any other money in connection with the Fyre Festival if they had known that they were not going to be receiving the accommodations, amenities, security and access to activities that they were told they were going to experience at the Fyre Festival.

155. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses Class were consequently injured when Fyre Festival was abruptly cancelled due to under-preparation and inadequate facilities and they did not receive and were not going to be receiving the accommodations, amenities, security and access to activities that they were told they were going to experience at the Fyre Festival.

156. As a result of Defendants' fraudulent representations and omissions, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses were damaged in an amount to be proven at trial.

FIFTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Contract/ Third Party Beneficiary As Against Fyre Media Only)

157. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporates herein by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint as though fully set forth herein.

158. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Defendant Fyre Media.

159. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses entered into contracts with Fyre Media to provide a luxury festival experience in exchange for money. Plaintiffs who purchased tickets to, and other items associated with, the Fyre Festival provided payment in consideration for Fyre Media's promise to provide a luxurious music festival and otherwise fully performed their obligations under the contracts. Plaintiffs who attended the Fyre Festival with tickets purchased by others, and expended monies associated with the Fyre Festival, such as purchases made on the cashless wristband and travel and other accommodations, are third party beneficiaries of ticket purchasers' contracts as those contracts were made to benefit such attendees, and fully performed any obligations on their behalf.

160. As alleged herein, Defendant Fyre Media breached the contracts with Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses by, among other things, failing to provide a luxury festival experience and providing substandard tents rather than the promised luxury accommodations and atmosphere, scarce food, no musical acts and ultimately a cancelled event.

161. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses expended money to purchase their tickets and/or other items associated with the Fyre Festival.

162. As a direct and proximate result of Defendant Fyre Media's breach of contract, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses were damaged in an amount to be proven at trial.

SIXTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Inducement of Breach of Contract)

163. Plaintiffs reallege and incorporates herein by reference each and every allegation contained in the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint as though fully set forth herein.

164. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Defendants Atkins, McFarland and Margolin.

165. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses directly or as third party beneficiaries entered into contracts with Fyre Media to provide a luxury festival experience in exchange for money. Plaintiffs provided payment in consideration for Fyre Media's promise to provide a luxurious music festival and otherwise fully performed their obligations under the contracts.

166. Defendants McFarland, Atkins and Margolin were aware of the contracts given their high level involvement and roles, as alleged above, with the Fyre Festival, Fyre Media and Fyre Festival LLC and profited personally from them. Regarding Defendant Atkins, in particular, as founder, officer, director, owner, and influencer, he was very much aware of the contracts as he and his entities were hawking them to the world through social media or hiring celebrities to hawk the items for them.

167. By virtue of the actions and omissions alleged herein, Defendant Fyre Media breached the contracts with Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses by, among other things, failing to provide a luxury festival experience providing substandard tents rather than the promised luxury villas, scarce food, no musical acts and ultimately a cancelled event.

168. Based upon the actions and omissions alleged herein, Defendants Atkins, McFarland and Margolin induced Fyre Media to breach its contracts with the members of the Class and Subclasses by acting for their own interests, particularly as defendants Atkins and McFarland guaranteed a multimillion dollar loan which needed to be paid in substantial part before the commencement of the Festival, and the easiest way to try to repay it was to collect money from consumers under false pretenses and fail to provide the experience for which consumers contracted

169. As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' McFarland, Atkins and Margolin's inducement of breach of contract, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses were damaged in an amount to be proven at trial.

SEVENTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing As Against Fyre Media Only)

170. Plaintiffs repeat, reallege, and incorporate by reference each of the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth herein.

171. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Fyre Media.

172. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses entered into direct and/or third party beneficiary contracts with Fyre Media to provide a luxury festival experience in exchange for money. Plaintiffs provided payment in consideration for Fyre Media's promise to provide a luxurious music festival and otherwise fully performed their obligations under the contracts.

173. As alleged herein, Fyre Media's acts and omissions and failure to provide a luxury music festival as promised interfered with Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses right to receive the benefits of the contracts and constituted a breach of its duty of good faith with Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses.

174. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses expended money to purchase their tickets and other items associated with the Fyre Festival.

175. As a direct and proximate result of Fyre Media's breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses were damaged in an amount to be proven at trial.

EIGHTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Unjust Enrichment)

176. Plaintiffs repeat, reallege, and incorporate by reference each of the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth herein.

177. Plaintiffs bring this claim individually and on behalf of the members of the Class and Subclasses against Defendants.

178. By their wrongful acts and omissions regarding the Fyre Festival, as discussed above, Defendants were unjustly enriched at the expense of Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses, who did not receive the benefit for which they were promised and they were entitled – as alleged in detail above – for attendance to a music festival, and thus, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses were unjustly deprived.

179. Defendant Fyre Media was enriched by, among other things, the financial benefit from sales of tickets to the Fyre Festival and sales of Fyre Festival merchandise.

180. Defendants McFarland and Atkins interacted with consumers about the Fyre Festival and were unjustly enriched by, among other things, compensation or remuneration based, in whole or part on ticket and merchandise sales and the proceeds of sales of tickets and merchandise directly reduced the amount of the outstanding loan regarding the Fyre Festival and hence reduced the liability of McFarland and Atkins as personal guarantors of the loan. Defendant Atkins also received or was promised financial remuneration for appearing at the Fyre Festival. As alleged above, the loan was obtained only mere days prior to the Festival, and there was an increased the push to sell tickets and merchandise after signing the guaranties in order to reduce the amount of the loan to try to avoid responsibility on the personal guaranties. This was to personally enhance the pockets of Atkins and Margolin.

181. Defendant Margolin interacted with consumers about the Fyre Festival and was unjustly enriched by, among other things, compensation or remuneration based, in whole or part on ticket and merchandise sales.

182. It would be inequitable and unconscionable for Defendants to retain the profit, benefit and other compensation it obtained from its deceptive, misleading, and unlawful conduct alleged herein.

183. Plaintiffs and the members of the Class seek restitution from Defendants, and seek an order of this Court disgorging all profits, benefits, and other compensation obtained by Defendants from its wrongful conduct.

NINTH CAUSE OF ACTION
(Violation of N.Y. Gen Bus. Law § 349, et seq.)

184. Plaintiffs repeat, reallege, and incorporate by reference each of the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth herein.

185. Plaintiffs bring this cause of action on behalf of themselves and all of the members of the Class and the Subclasses as the deceptive practices with respect to the entire Class occurred in and emanated from New York, where Fyre Media and Fyre Festival were headquartered, and where the individual defendants resided, conducted business and/or had extensive ties. Alternatively, Plaintiffs Herlihy, Lauriello and Jutla bring this cause of action on behalf of themselves and the New York Subclass.

186. Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses are individuals that paid for Fyre Festival tickets and other items associated with the Fyre Festival for personal purposes.

187. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, engaged in deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of their business, trade, and commerce or furnishing of services, in violation of N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349 in the promotion of the Fyre Festival and sale of the Fyre Festival tickets and other items associated with the Fyre Festival, including by misrepresenting the characteristics, and qualities of the Fyre Festival as alleged herein, such as representing that: (1) the Fyre Festival would take place on a private island, (2) the island was previously owned by Pablo Escobar, (3) the Fyre Festival would have a luxury atmosphere and accommodations, (4) the line of up music guests were filled with celebrity performers, (5) the cuisine would be first class, and (6) the Fyre Festival would be filled with famous models on yachts.

188. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, engaged in deceptive acts or practices in the conduct of their business, trade, and commerce or furnishing of services, in violation of N.Y. Gen. Bus. Law § 349 by concealing, suppressing and omitting material facts, such as the island's inadequate infrastructure, the lack of preparedness of accommodations and activities at the Fyre Festival, and that Defendants had created an unsafe environment at the Fyre Festival.

189. Defendants' representations and omissions were material because they were likely to deceive reasonable consumers about the characteristics and quality of the Fyre Festival.

190. Defendants, including Atkins, Margolin and McFarland, acted intentionally, knowingly, and maliciously to violate New York's General Business Law, and recklessly disregarded Plaintiffs and the rights of the Plaintiffs and the Class and Subclasses.

191. As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' deceptive and unlawful acts and practices, Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses have suffered and will continue to suffer injury and damages.

192. Defendants' deceptive and unlawful acts and practices complained of herein, affected the public interest and consumers at large.

193. The above deceptive and unlawful practices and acts by Defendants caused substantial injury to Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclasses that they could not reasonably avoid.

194. Plaintiffs and members of the Class and Subclasses seek all monetary and non-monetary relief allowed by law, including, per class and Subclasses member, actual damages or statutory damages of $50 (whichever is greater), treble damages, attorney's fees and costs.
